The purpose of this course is to explore the roles and responsibilities of the mass media in society and culture. During the Spring 2016 semester we will be reading and critiquing research on how mainstream media and social media cover gendered violence as well as exploring how audiences use social media to provide counter narratives to the predominant images in media. Additional specific topics related to the main area of construction and framing of gendered violence will come from the individual interests and research/projects of the seminar participants. The final paper for the course will be an original research paper (Ph.D. students and research track MA students) or a more professionally oriented paper or project (option available to professional track MA students). There is no restriction on the theoretical perspective or methodological approach taken in the papers.

In addition to the purpose listed below, The School of Media and Journalism’s accrediting body outlines a number of values you should be aware of and competencies you should be able to demonstrate by the time you graduate from our program. Learn more about them here:

http://www2.ku.edu/~aeejmc/PROGRAM/PRINCIPLES.SHTML#vals&comps

No single course could possibly give you all of these values and competencies; but collectively, our classes are designed to build your abilities in each of these areas.

In this 841 graduate level seminar focusing on constructions of gendered violence, we will focus on the following values and competencies:

• demonstrate an understanding of gender, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation and, as appropriate, other forms of diversity in domestic society in relation to mass communications.
• contribute to knowledge appropriate to the communications professions in which they work.

Important UNC policies and procedures:

The Honor Code
The Honor Code is, as always, in effect at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. You are expected to uphold all aspects of the Honor Code. If you have questions about the Honor Code, please see me.
Read more at https://studentconduct.unc.edu/honor-system

Special Accommodations:
If you require special accommodations to attend or participate in this course, please let the instructor know as soon as possible. If you need information about disabilities visit the Accessibility Services website at https://accessibility.unc.edu/

Diversity:
The University's policy on Prohibiting Harassment and Discrimination is outlined in the 2015-2016 Undergraduate Bulletin http://www.unc.edu/ugradbulletin/

UNC is committed to providing an inclusive and welcoming environment for all members of our community and does not discriminate in offering access to its educational programs and activities on the basis of age, gender, race, color, national origin, religion, creed, disability, veteran’s status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression.

Title IX

Title IX makes it clear that violence and harassment based on sex and gender is a Civil Rights offense subject to the same kinds of accountability and the same kinds of support applied to offenses against other protected categories such as race, national origin, etc. If you or someone you know has been harassed or assaulted, you can find the appropriate resources here http://campusconversation.web.unc.edu/resources/

Textbooks

In addition to these two textbooks, I have also assigned other readings for the course. You can find the required readings or resources on the Sakai site. At the end of the syllabus, I’ve provided some additional readings and resources.

Requirements and Grades

The course will be conducted as a graduate seminar – this means students are expected to participate in discussions on assigned readings and on their own research interests or projects, to provide critiques of and comments on course readings, and to produce a final original research paper or project by the end of the semester. Graduate grades are H, P, L, and F.

If you are still trying to understand what graduate grades mean, here’s a general description.

- H means a truly outstanding performance in the class and on assignments.
- P is a good, solid performance overall in the class and on assignments.
- L is a performance in the class and on assignments that is below the acceptable level for graduate students. It means the student does not understand the course material very well, does not have a grasp of what is required in this area at the graduate level, and is not participating in the class at the level expected of graduate students.
- F is the same as it is for undergraduates. It’s failing.

Below, I’ve tried to give you a general idea of how different requirements will be weighted in this course. Your grade, generally, is determined by: active participation in class, grades on assignments and papers, and your work in class in relation to others.

- Attendance & general participation – 10%
- Leading class discussion on course reading(s) – 15%
- Proposal – 30%
- Final paper – 45%
Assignments and Course Responsibilities

Attendance & general participation (10%): As you know, attendance and participation in graduate classes are critically important. Skipping class or missing class for travel is not an option at the graduate level. However, if you have an emergency and need to miss class, please email me beforehand and tell me the day you plan to miss and the reason. You are also expected to be in class when the class starts and to come prepared to participate in class discussions. That is, you are expected to be familiar with all of the readings and prepared to discuss them.

Leading class discussion on course readings (15%): An important part of your participation in the seminar is your ability to lead our discussions on some of the assigned readings. Each student will select a total of 3 readings listed on the syllabus and will lead our conversation about that reading. Everyone in the seminar will have read all of the pieces, but our discussion leaders will help focus our critique and understanding of the readings through questions and comments they have about the readings. You are not meant to summarize the reading for us, but rather to call our attention to some important points about the reading and provide some questions for us to discuss. You may substitute a reading of your choice (scholarly or professional) for one of the readings you report on.

Proposal (30%): You will write a proposal for the final research study or project you will be doing in the class. The proposal should be approximately 10 (double-spaced) pages or approximately 3000 words. For students doing the research paper, your proposal should include a literature review and research methods for carrying out your study. For students doing the more professional oriented project, your proposal should include a literature review of the conceptual area that will guide your project and an outline of the procedures (and availability of resources) for your project. We will talk about proposal writing during the semester.

Final paper (45%): Ph.D. students and research track MA students will write an original research paper (approximately 25 (double-spaced) pages or approximately 7,500 words for their final paper in the course. You should decide on a general area of interest early in the semester. Students will also need to investigate possible conventions and publications to which they could submit their papers or how their papers might be used in future projects. There is no restriction on the theoretical perspective or methodological approach taken in the papers. Professional track MA students may write a traditional research paper or may do a more professionally oriented paper or a project.

Presentation of final paper (graded pass/fail): Papers will be presented the last two days of class, and each student will have approximately 15 minutes to present the findings or results of his/her research or to show his/her final project. Of course, students are expected to attend both days of the research presentations.
Tentative Course Schedule

| January 13  | Intro to course procedures and design: Feminist approaches to media coverage of violence and engaged scholarship.
As defined by UNC, “faculty ‘engagement’ refers to scholarly, creative or pedagogical activities for the public good, directed toward persons and groups outside [UNC]. Such activities (in the form of research, teaching and/or service) develop as collaborative interactions that respond to short and long-term societal needs. Engagement serves people in our state, nation or the wider world through a continuum of academically informed activities.” Specifically, engaged scholarship is defined as “Scholarly efforts to expand multifacetedintellectual endeavor with a commitment to public practices and public consequences.” |
| January 20  | Feminist approaches to media: A quick tour of the foundations and standpoint theory.
